States of engagement

Another way of understanding employees' experiences is by exploring their different states of engagement based on how they answered the four survey questions that measure the two characteristics in the roof of the house model (job satisfaction and organization commitment).

Generally, when employees are engaged, they are:

- Satisfied with their job, and
- Committed to their organization.

Employees' commitment and satisfaction scores tend to move in tandem. As satisfaction increases, their commitment tends to increase as well (higher engagement). As satisfaction diminishes, commitment likely also declines (lower engagement). By plotting employees' satisfaction scores against their commitment scores, we can see how employees cluster within different states.

For example, employees who are highly committed and highly satisfied (scores ≥ 75 points) are considered to be engaged. Alternatively, employees who are highly committed (scores ≥ 60 points), but are not satisfied (scores ≤ 60 points), are considered to be unhappily dedicated.

The figure displays the proportion of respondents in Corporate belonging to each of the six states graphically.

13 factors - a new approach to analyze engagement survey results

There are 13 factors that can impact the mental health of employees in the workplace. Using the engagement survey results, we can identify questions which relate to those factors and calculate an average score for each of the factors. If you want to learn more about the 13 factors, you can watch videos, explaining each factor in more depth: <https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PL2NuAPXp8ohZmoVaECI6sRiV9IQ25XkId>
