

A Discussion on Yukon Innovation

Looking five years forward

The Government of Yukon is working on an innovation plan and wants to engage with Yukoners.

Why create an innovation plan?

Building on the momentum and success stories on the entrepreneurial ecosystem in the past five years, Yukon is taking action to grow innovation across all business sectors within the territory. A strong innovation culture gives our territory a competitive edge and positions Yukon for continued success in the knowledge economy. It contributes to sustainable economic growth and diversification, fostering a robust and resilient economy with social and wealth benefits for all citizens.

This engagement is seeking input from industry and the public on the programs, services and global innovation trends that would create a positive impact for Yukon. The insights gathered will be compiled into a What We Heard Report and will contribute to the development of a five-year innovation strategy for Yukon.

Solvest employee installing solar panels.

Focus on support

To ensure we are working across all sectors and supporting economic diversification in Yukon, we will consult across a wide range of sectors around a variety of ideas concentrating on the following pillars:

- Talent and skill development;
- Supporting research and innovation;
- Access to capital; and
- Simple, inclusive program development.

One-on-one interviews, group meetings and a public survey will be available for your participation in the conversation.

What is innovation?

Innovation is the creation of new businesses, social models, or improving processes or service delivery in established businesses and industries. Innovation is not limited to the technology sector.

